TRAILER:

SYNOPSIS: LoveTown is the pop-musical tale of a dysfunctional bar singer who helps three wandering souls find their way back to love. All the while... her time is running out.

In the spirit of “Glee” (for adults) LoveTown is a modern musical for people who don’t always love musicals. It finds its voice in new, original rock songs and an engaging storyline. Dark, witty and hopeful, LoveTown proves that “pain may shape us, but it’s love... love that defines us, baby.”

NOTES:

- LoveTown is the first feature film by husband/wife creative team Jay & Ann-Janette Webster. Originally premiering as a live stage show at the OKM International Music Festival, the Websters re-imagined the work as a feature film and spent two years in production. LoveTown combines the team's two decades of film and video production experience with Ann-Janette's noted talents as a singer/songwriter. (Prior to writing and performing the songs for LoveTown, Ann-Janette's music was the subject of a 1 hour PBS concert, "Brighter Day Ahead".)

- LoveTown premiered at deadCENTER film festival in June of 2012 and introduced many to the talents of the Websters, but also those of the fantastic primary cast. Many of the musicians featured in LoveTown have successful solo ventures and represent a wide range of musical genres.
- LoveTown was shot on location in Bartlesville, OK, Tulsa, OK and Chicago, IL with primary shooting taking place in 6 weeks. Produced on a micro-budget, the film is truly a labor of love for the entire cast & crew.

I think this film is the beginning of something not the end. I could see this turning into a series where each episode tells the story of someone struggling with love as we all do. Great story.

Great story - catchy songs that actually told the story instead of just being add ons. The visuals were different and intriguing.
